

CCEH Weekly Digest

A Letter From CEO Richard Cho

Dear Friends,

On Monday, we will once again celebrate the life, legacy, and vision of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Many of us use this day to re-center ourselves around Dr. King's dream of a society where diversity is not only tolerated, but celebrated, a nation that strives not only for equality in law, but in livelihood, and a society that holds together not only in civility, but in love.

This year, of course, we celebrate Martin Luther King Jr. Day amidst an utterly disturbing backdrop of events: an armed insurrection and reports of further violence by extremist and white supremacist groups on top of the pandemic of COVID-19, systemic racism, homelessness and rising economic inequality. Some might see this juxtaposition of moments as one of stark contrasts or even as an indication that Dr. King's legacy has failed. How indeed are we to make sense of the legacy of Dr. King when white supremacist groups are on the rise? When our nation seems more divided along racial and ethnic lines than ever? When income equality, poverty, hunger, and homelessness in America are worse than they have ever been?

For my part, I don't see these as contradictions or as indications of a failed legacy. Rather I see this as a reminder that Dr. King's dream—of a nation in which all people are respected and valued, that rejects the idea that people should be hungry or homeless while others have incomprehensible wealth, and of a society grounded in love—was forged at a time of sharp contrasts, divisions, and inequality. And while many of us may be feeling dejected about the state of our nation, we should also remind ourselves how far we have come. Remember that Dr. King and his colleagues were fighting for Black Americans in the South to be able to exercise their basic right to vote. More than fifty years later, Black voters in Georgia came out in full strength both in November and then again in January to turn our nation back towards hope, unity, empathy, and truth. Dr. King's America was full of strife and our America today is still full of strife, but that long moral arc of the universe continues to bend towards justice. Let's also remember that it doesn't bend that way on its own. We all need to put in the work to bend it.

One of the ways that you can help do that is to support our work to advocate to end homelessness and to achieve housing justice. Next week we will share our 2021 Housing Equals Justice legislative advocacy agenda, which includes policy priorities that advance racial justice, economic justice, and criminal justice reform. The agenda includes a justice reinvestment proposal to ensure that as underutilized prisons are closed, that the resources realized through closures are redirected towards services that assist returning citizens to safely and successfully reenter our communities, especially housing assistance. Coupled with this, we will be re-introducing a bill that prevents people from being denied housing based on their criminal record without having the opportunity to provide other information. In addition, we also will be supporting legislation that will increase funding and compensation for front line homeless services workers, who are disproportionately people of color and who have put their health and lives on the line this past 10 months to serve and protect others.

At the same time that we are advocating at the Capitol, we will be taking our efforts to every corner of the state through our My Town Cares municipal campaign, through which we are calling on all 169 towns to play a part in preventing and ending homelessness. In a state as segregated and unequal as Connecticut, the idea that every town has a role to play in ending homelessness is a powerful one. In Dr. King's words, also written from the Birmingham jail:

I am cognizant of the interrelatedness of all communities and states. I cannot sit idly by in Atlanta and not be concerned about what happens in Birmingham. Injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere. We are caught in an inescapable network of mutuality, tied in a single garment of destiny. Whatever affects one directly, affects all indirectly. Never again can we afford to live with the narrow, provincial "outside agitator" idea. Anyone who lives inside the United States can never be considered an outsider anywhere within its bounds.

This Monday, let us remember and honor Dr. King and his legacy, not with wishful nostalgia, but by taking up his call to action to "make a career of humanity. Commit yourself to the noble struggle for equal rights. You will make a better person of yourself, a greater nation of your country, and a finer world to live in."

Yours Truly,

Richard Cho
CEO

CCEH Announces Partnership Focused on Criminal Justice Reinvestment

This Tuesday at 12 P.M., Senator Gary Winfield will be joining ACLU CT, CCEH, SEIU 1199, and Yale Transitions Clinic for a press conference announcing The Justice Reinvestment Coalition, a group of labor, criminal legal system reformers, and community partners who have come together to fight for equity and justice-impacted people in Connecticut through reinvestment of DOC dollars into programs that seek to undo the harms of the criminal legal system.

The press conference will be outlining the coalition's legislative priorities to address justice reform, including CCEH's commitment to the Creation of a 'reentry housing assistance' line item within the Department of Correction budget and reallocate no less than $2 million annually to contract with community-based organizations to provide housing-related case management, housing search and navigation, temporary rental assistance, and other basic needs for any inmate assessed as needing reentry housing assistance. This press conference will be made available on CCEH's Facebook page at noon on Tuesday, so please mark your calendars.

The Legacy of Martin Luther King Jr. in Our Work

In the past year CCEH has undertaken efforts within the community to develop capacity around racial equity as well as creating an internal Race Equity Taskforce. We have grown to recognize that we need to do more to understand how homelessness affects people of color in regions throughout the state and take action to address issues specific to communities of color. We offer trainings for providers on racial equity as it applies to homelessness and through additional data plans to continue to seek out opportunities to increase our depth of work in this area. Currently we are working to translate some of the pages on our website into Spanish and documents for Spanish speaking clients.

Announcing My Town Cares, a Partnership with CCM and Sustainable CT

My Town CARES

We are pleased announce the launch of My Town Cares, a campaign CCEH has launched in partnership with the Connecticut Conference of Municipalities and Sustainable CT to engage Connecticut's towns and cities in taking action to address and prevent homelessness in their communities. Connecticut's towns and cities can take steps outlined in Sustainable CT's Effective, Compassionate Homelessness Prevention category to end homelessness in their communities, and receive credit for doing so as part of Sustainable CT's 2021 cycle. CCEH will provide technical assistance to participating municipalities, both in taking the actions outlined in the roadmap and in addressing more immediate issues.

Please contact Carl Asikainen with specific questions about how your town can participate.

Point-in-Time 2021 to Take Place on January 26th

Please help us spread the word! CCEH is seeking municipal employees in towns across the state to participate in this year's Point-in-Time Count which will take place January 26th. Our objective is to make sure that we have feet on the ground in all 169 Connecticut towns in order to ensure that every person experiencing homelessness is surveyed and connected with services.

Please encourage municipal employees and other volunteers from your town to register for Tuesday's Point-in-Time Count training here. If you are a provider who missed the January 5th training designed for outreach staff with HMIS access, click here to view the training recording here.

To learn more about this year's Point-in-Time Count, please visit our website.

COVID-19 Vaccine for Homeless Shelter

Providers

Connecticut's vaccine advisory group recommends next phase of COVID-19 vaccine distribution include residents and staff of homeless shelters. You can read the news article here.

CCEH continues to advocate for people experiencing homelessness and the staff who serve them in person to be included in CT's Phase 1b. Providers are encouraged to monitor communications from the state closely, as planning and communication around the vaccine can change quickly. Please visit the official State's website.

A special thanks to Deirdre DiCara, Executive Director of Friends in Service to Humanity of Northwestern Connecticut, Inc., for submitting comments during the subcommittee's live deliberations on Tuesday!

CT REALTORS make be homeful for the Holidays a homerun

What a year! Thanks to all of you for participating in this year's be homeful for the holidays campaign, which raised more than $70,000 through our fifth annual Paddington bear-raiser drive! Just before Christmas, the CT REALTORS Association, who both sponsored and "bear-raised" with gusto, delivered bears to 32 shelters throughout the state. Thank you, both for bringing joy to the faces of children around the state, and for providing much-needed shelter diversion funds to help families remain housed!
